Discriminative Stimulus is the Cue to Respond Transcript

In the first example, the sight word “house”, the word on the card is the S-Dee or discriminative stimulus for the student to say the word house. In the second example, the written math problem of 4+3= and multiple choice responses. The S-Dee is the written equation of 4+3= and the response the student should select is the answer C or 7. In the final example, the S-Dee is a comprehension question asked “What planet do we live on?” and the response is that the student says “earth”. Note that in each of these examples, the student has an equal chance of being right or wrong. The stimulus or cue to respond in no way provides help with the answer.
